

OSPO

OPEN SCHOLARSHIP POLICY OBSERVATORY

Érudit and PKP support the Jussieu Call for Open Science and Bibliodiversity

by Caroline Winter | 14 February 2018 | English, Observations and Responses, Responses | 0 comments

Lisez-le en français

This response to the Jussieu Call for Open Science and Bibliodiversity was written by Tanja Niemann, Directrice générale, Consortium Érudit and Brian Owen, Associate Dean of Libraries at SFU Library & PKP Managing Director.

The Érudit and Public Knowledge Project team members want to affirm their formal and enthusiastic support for the Jussieu Call for Open Science and Bibliodiversity. The two organizations, which have been developing open and interoperable research infrastructures for some time, joined together in 2017 (CO-SHS project) to create a sustainable open access funding model based on partnerships with Canadian research libraries (Open Access Partnership, Coalition Publi.ca). Érudit and PKP are also very active on a broad range of international initiatives with other groups (African Journals Online, Collaborative Knowledge Foundation, ImpactStory, Huma-Num, OpenEdition, Open Library of Humanities, Persée, SciELO and others) that share similar objectives.

We believe that it is urgent to redefine the balance of power in the world of scholarly publishing for the free circulation of knowledge. It is in order to affirm the importance of a reinforcement of the collaborations among non-commercial research infrastructures that Érudit and the Public Knowledge Project join the initiators of the Jussieu Call and encourage the SSH research community to read it.

On behalf of the teams,

Tanja Niemann – Directrice générale, Consortium Érudit

Brian Owen – Managing Director, Public Knowledge Project

Search

Archives

Categories

Community News

English

French

Observations

Observations and Responses

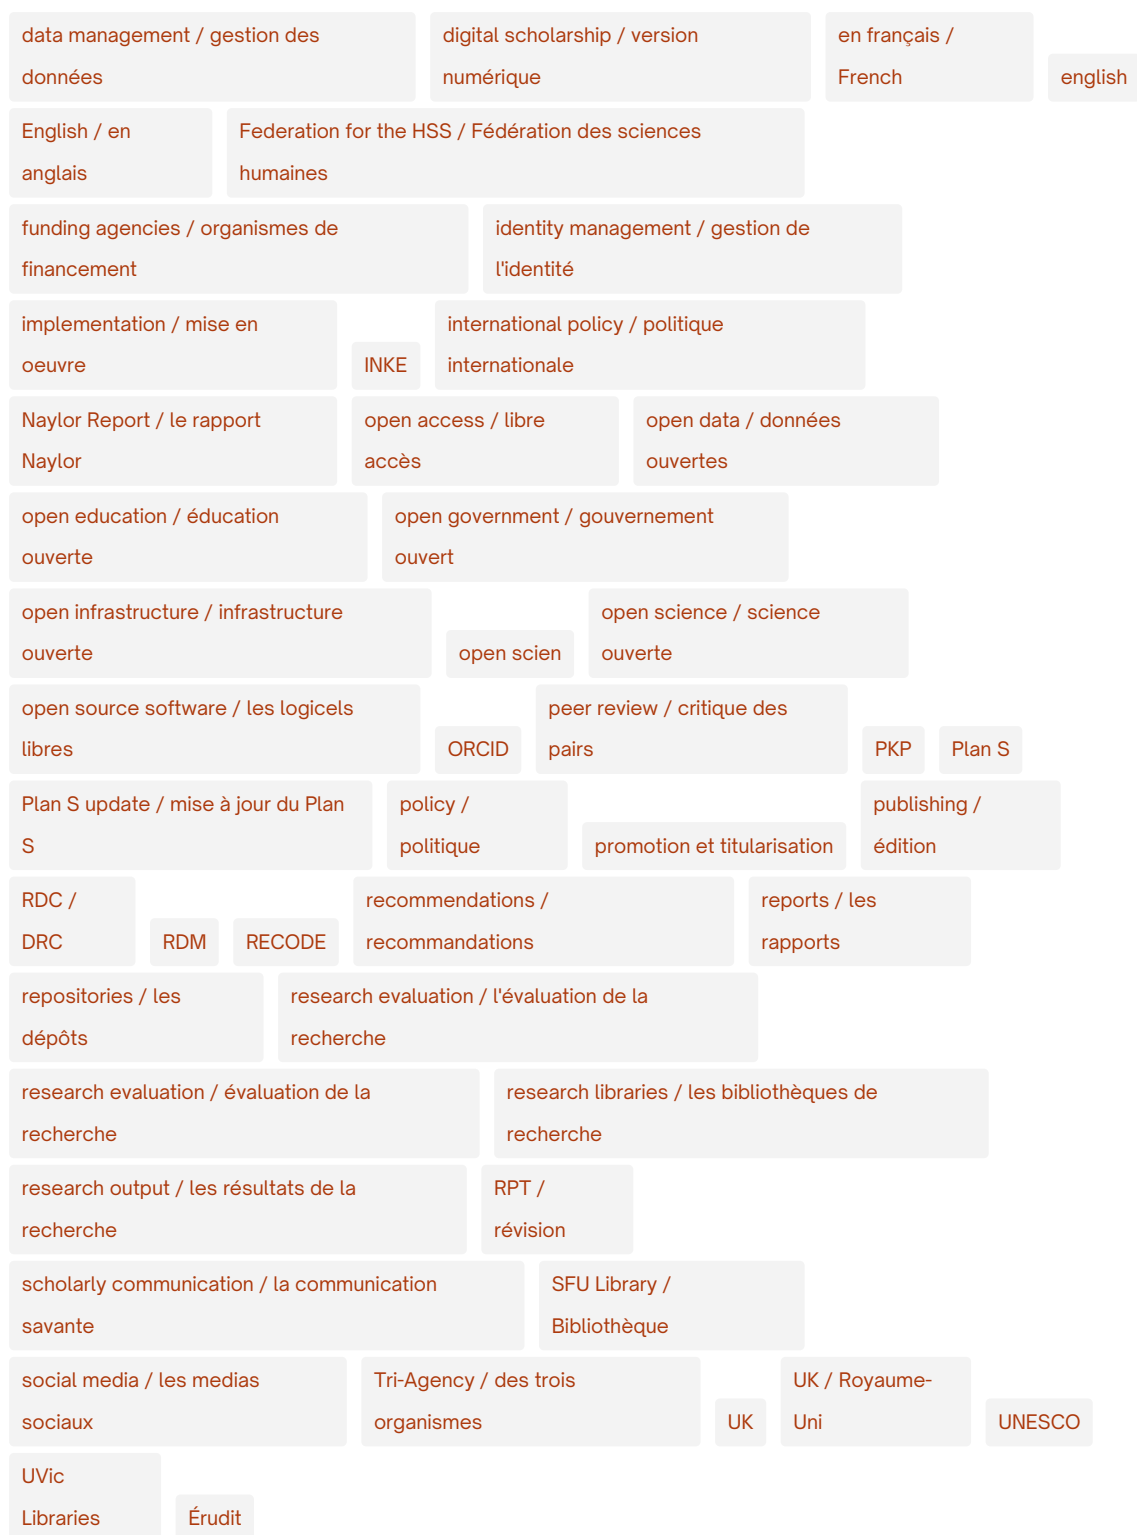

Policies

Responses

Uncategorized

Tags

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-ShareAlike 4.0 International License.

